A firefighter's workout: kids at summer camp try out an obstacle course

Firefighters from West Sacramento's Station 41 and Station 45 (15th Street and Lake Washington Blvd., respectively) led about 75 children at a city summer camp through a physical fitness obstacle course last month. They stressed the importance of physical fitness, and showed the campers what kinds of tasks a firefighter must be able to do. The kids ran about 100 yards to different stations of the obstacle course while carrying a hose pack, and did tasks such as stacking and pulling hose and hitting a prop with a sledgehammer.

Yolo County jail: in want of an expansion plan

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

When Yolo County dropped its plans to create a "re-entry facility" for prisoners, in a rural part of the county, the state pulled away a related incentive of providing $30 million in assistance to renovate the Yolo County Jail in Woodland.

The whole episode was unfortunate, said Michael McGowan, a West Sacramento resident and chairman of the Yolo County Board of Supervisors.

The re-entry facility in Madison was not, he feels, a "jail" as it was characterized by local opponents.

"It involved taking prisoners who were in their last years of incarceration – providing they were nonviolent and non-sex offenders, and taking in just inmates who would otherwise be paroled back within Yolo County," said McGowan. "These guys are coming back to us anyway, so let's put them in a re-entry facility and give them drug testing, some job skills and remove some tattoos."

"Certainly, many of the neighbors didn't like the idea," he added. "They classified it as a prison and didn't want it in the rural part of the county."

But as the proposal developed, said McGowan, the state became a problem as well.

"The state was just non-responsive. I felt they started getting cold feet as a result of some of the local neighbors' criticism and political activism. We finally said the heck with it, and don't bother us no more."

What about a different site for the re-entry facility?

"We couldn't find another site," he said. "There were always some local concerns. And (the legislation) gives the cities the right to veto a re-entry facility within the cities, so we didn't even try looking within the cities."

As an incentive for a re-entry facility, the state had dangled $30 million in money to help expand the crowded jail in Woodland. The jail is fighting problems of overcrowding.

"We are still under a federal decree," said McGowan. "We

State raids West Sac's redevelopment funds

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon told the News-Ledger last month that he felt West Sacramento was having to make budget cuts for this recession two times – once to balance its own books, and a second time to help the State of California balance its books.

Since that remark, the state has since finalized a budget. That budget does include "taking" $6.5 million from West Sacramento's redevelopment agency this year and another $1.3 million next year. It also includes borrowing $2 million from the city for up to three years, whether West Sacramento wants to lend the money or not.

A proposal to take about $500,000 in the city's share of gas tax revenues has melted away – but state legislators did opt to delay payment of the city's share of these and other revenues. The money helps pay for local road repairs and Public Works Department expenses.

Pondering the hit to the redevelopment agency last month, when a $3 million "take" was on the table, Cabaldon last month called the impacts "huge." He said "that basically wipes out (new) redevelopment projects for the foreseeable future."

City Manager Toby Ross has sent a letter to city staff discussing impacts to the city budget.

"The amount being taken from the Redevelopment Agency is significant," Ross wrote. "We are exploring ways to address the issue. . . While not receiving our gas tax and Proposition 42 revenue in a timely manner is disturbing, we believe we can manage through it."

Ross will present a report on the problem, and some possible solutions, at tonight's city council meeting. A formal report with recommendations will go before the council on Aug. 19.

'Jaws of Life' needed after crash

A woman was seriously injured in a two-car traffic accident on Enterprise Blvd. last Wednesday.

The West Sacramento Fire Department reports that both vehicles were badly damaged. One driver was only slightly hurt, but the other received "major" injuries and was pinned in her vehicle. Firefighters used extrication equipment to free her. She was taken by ambulance to the UC Davis Medical Center.

The accident occurred around 8:30 p.m. at Enterprise and Seaport boulevards.

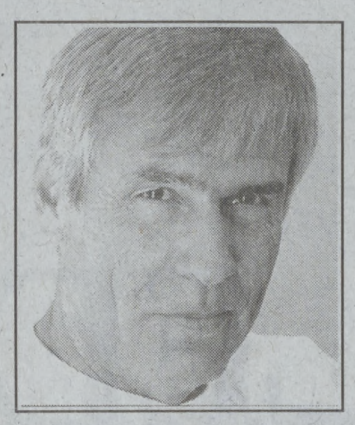
According to West Sacramento Police Department records, the woman's troubles may not end with her injuries. She may face drug-related charges after investigating officers found suspected methamphetamine and drug paraphernalia in her car. A nurse at the hospital also found a pipe with suspected drug residue on it in the woman's possession. The injured woman was not arrested at the scene due to her injuries.

Police are investigating the accident.

Firefighters use the 'jaws of life' and a hydraulic ram to free a woman after a traffic accident on July 29. The 45-year old victim's injuries included two broken femurs.

Visiting Mission San Luis Obispo

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Awhile back I drove down to San Diego on Interstate 5, and although the whole trip took less than seven hours to complete, I vowed that no matter how much longer it would take for me to get back to West Sacramento, I was not going to return on that same hot, bouncy, scenery-starved, boring-to-death stretch of ugly asphalt. So, when it came time for me to head back home, I got out my trusty little map of California from my glove department and came up with the following plan: From San Diego to Capistrano Beach I would go ahead and use Interstate 5 (because that section goes along the Pacific Ocean), but then I would turn onto the Coastal Highway, which would take me through such interesting and pretty places as Laguna Beach, Newport Beach, Huntington Beach, Long Beach, Malibu Beach, Santa Monica, Ventura, Santa Barbara, and finally, with a little help from Highway 101, gorgeous San Luis Obispo. Then I would get back on the Coastal Highway and take it all the way up to San Francisco before getting on Highway 80 for the final leg of the trip home.

It all looked pretty good on paper, but it's been more years than I care to count since I had last traveled on the Southern California section of beautiful Highway 1, and although some of the sights were still breath-taking, almost everything from Laguna Beach all the way up to Santa Barbara is nothing more than one big continuous city nowadays.

Much of the way I was in stop-and-go traffic (although in Laguna Beach and Newport Beach I was at least surrounded by some of the most expensive cars ever created, not to mention all the million dollar yachts out in the harbors) and there were so many people on the beaches I passed that I could hardly see the sand. Plus by the time I finally reached Santa Barbara, I had already used up most of the seven hours it had taken me to get from West Sacramento to San Diego on Interstate 5 in the first place, and I still had almost 400 miles left to go before I would be home.

So, with dinner time rapidly approaching, I decided to drive on up to San Luis Obispo, find a nice peaceful place to eat, and determine then if I wanted to get back on Highway 1, or just stay on Highway 101, which would probably get me back to West Sac before midnight. But just when my little plan to make my trip home more visually exciting seemed like it was going to turn into a big bust, I somehow stumbled onto Mission San Luis Obispo de Tolosa, and a wonderfully friendly man named Juan. Juan lived a few houses down from the mission and not only did he know a good place where I could have dinner, but he had also lived in the area for decades and was a walking, talking history book.

Although I vaguely remembered some of the stuff Juan told me from my fourth grade California history class, he seemed to have at his fingertips on just about everything there is to know about California's Missions, especially Mission San Luis Obispo. He explained that it had been founded in 1772 by Father Junipero Serra because he needed a mission between the ones he had already established in San Diego and Monterey. He said the namesake of the mission was Saint Luis, the Bishop of Toulouse, and that the reason it had a roof of red, baked clay tiles was because the Indians (who at first apparently had no intention of becoming good Catholics) kept setting the old thatched roofs afire with blazing arrows. He also explained in great detail that when Father Serra first showed up, the whole area was the happy home of thousands of ferocious bears, and that the first Spaniards even called the place the Valley of the Bears.

Juan also showed me most of the sights, including the mission museum which contains an extensive collection of early photographs which present a vivid picture of the way California used to be before the discovery of gold and the massive immigration which changed things forever.

After my two (almost three) charming hours in San Luis Obispo, I realized that if I wanted to get home before midnight, it was obviously too late to get back on Highway 1, although I knew I would be missing out on Carmel, Monterey, and the beautiful night lights of San Francisco.

As I reluctantly motored onto Highway 101 and began traveling towards San Jose, I decided to dig around in the glove compartment for a new CD to play (one can only listen to Abba's greatest hits for so long) when I stumbled onto one by a singer named Mary Chapin Carpenter, which my daughter had given me to take along on the trip and told me I would love it. And since my only other choices seemed to be Billy Joel and Yanni, I slipped the Mary Chapin Carpenter album into the CD player and waited patiently to be impressed.

And it didn't take long, either, because the second song suddenly produced a little eight word lyric that not only put my whole trip to Southern California and back into its proper perspective , but much of life also. So, I will now share with you the eight most profound words I have heard strung together in quite some time: "Sometimes you're the windshield, sometimes you're the bug."

West Sacramento's Nicki I'Anson took first place in her age and weight division at the USPF (U.S. Powerlifting Federation) nationals competition in La Mirada early last month. She squatted 391.25 pounds (a state and world record), bench pressed 220.25 pounds and performed a state-record dead lift of 380.25 pounds.

Coaches include her mother, Lil Stewart, and also Troy and Tony Morales of Muscle Systems gym on Sacramento Avenue in West Sacramento.

FOLLOW-UP: what's happening to Yolo High; & how much Bakers Square cost the state

On July 8 and 22, the News-Ledger reported on a number of changes in the locations of different Washington Unified School District Schools. Among those changes was the planned move of the district's continuation high school, Yolo High, from its location next to the district offices on Westacre Road to a location across the street at the former Evergreen Elementary School.

The News-Ledger was not able to learn, at that time, what was in store for the current site of Yolo High School.

But Cliff Jones, director of facilities and planning for the district, provided an update last week, speaking by email.

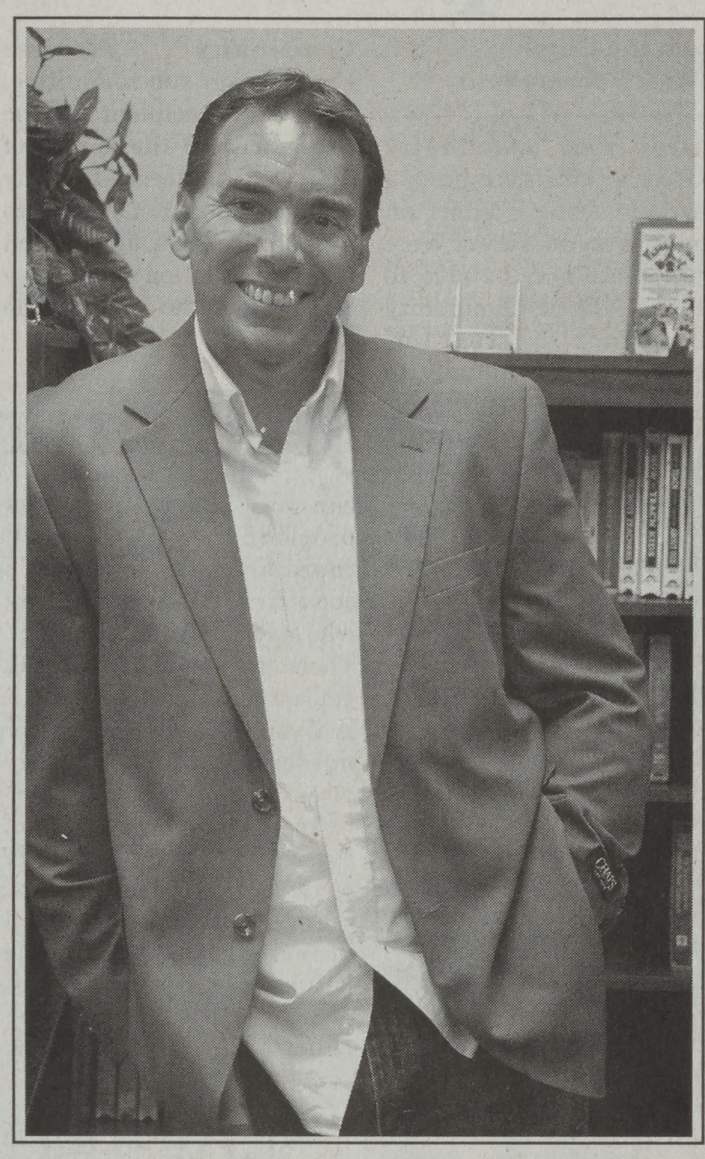
"Final use plans are not yet complete as the site is being evaluated; the site will most likely be used for ROP, professional development opportunities/activities, etc.," said Jones.

Last week, the News-Ledger reported on the renovation of the Harbor Boulevard freeway interchange in West Sacramento. Part of the discussion was about the sale of the old Bakers Square restaurant to Caltrans. The city redevelopment agency subsequently took title to the restaurant site and is marketing it for sale.

The News-Ledger wasn't immediately able to learn what the purchase price of the 1.42 acre property was for Caltrans. But later last week, a Caltrans spokesperson told the News-Ledger that the purchase price was about about $2.5 million.

Bosley replaces Jordan at helm of teen center

From the Collings West Sacramento Teen Center



DON BOSLEY

West Sacramento's Don Bosley will be the new executive director of the Collings West Sacramento Teen Center on Merkley Avenue.

Bosley was among those who helped create the center over a dozen years ago. He previously served as the center's communications director, and will replace John Jordan, who stepped down as executive director in June.

"Somehow it just seems fitting that Don be the guy who steps into this vacancy," said Gary Fox, executive director of Campus Life Connections, the Christian nonprofit that administers the teen center. "Don and his wife Melody were some of the people who first came to us many ears ago and asked for help in putting a teen center in West Sacramento. They had a hand in building this ship, and now they'll be steering it."

Bosley was a sports and feature writer for the Sacramento Bee for 22 years, and has experience in youth mentoring and ministry.

"Because of the deep passion of people like John Jordan and (former executive director) Dave Dove, the Collings Teen Center is healthier and more relevant in the lives of West Sacramento teenages than it has ever been," Bosley said in a press release. "Day by day, those guys have earned the center a great name in this city. They've set the table for us, and now we're going to invite more and more kids to that table."

The teen center is closed for most programs during the summer, but will reopen for after-school drop-in on Aug. 26, when local schools start.

Council ponders pot dealers

City council to hear report tonight & may extend moratorium on 'medicinal marijuana' dispensaries within city limits

The West Sacramento City Council plans to consider extending a moratorium on the retail sales of medicinal marijuana on Aug. 19.

On July 8, the city council voted to enact a 45-day moratorium on marijuana dispensaries. City staff reported that since the U.S. Attorney General announced that the federal government wouldn't prosecute outlets that were operating legally under the state's laws, the city had received inquiries from potential pot retailers.

Staff were concerned about the impacts of local dispensaries, including possible increases in crime and the sale of illegal drugs near pot dispensaries. They asked the council for time to study the issue and potential zoning for pot dispensaries.

The council meeting on Aug. 19 will take place at 7 p.m. at city hall, 1110 West Capitol Avenue.

At tonight's meeting, the council will receive a written report on the marijuana dispensary issue and provide initial "direction" to city staff.

'Mini-grants' available to non-profits serving West Sac

From the City of West Sacramento

Does your community service organization have a great idea, but is short on funds? If so, the City of West Sacramento may be able to help. The City's "Community Mini-Grant Program" provides funds annually to help qualifying West Sacramento non-profit organizations with special funding needs. This year $30,000 is available to non-profit organization applicants that can demonstrate a viable need that benefits West Sacramento and its residents. Applications for the mini-grant program must be submitted by September 25, 2009, to the Parks & Recreation Department at 1110 West Capitol Avenue, West Sacramento, CA 95691.

Mini-grant requests are reviewed by a Parks & Community Services Commission sub-committee. Mini-Grant recipients will be announced in the spring of 2010. If selected, your organization must enter into a signed contract, after which your organization will receive 80 percent of the funding. The remaining 20 percent will be awarded when all original receipts are submitted and it is determined that the funds were spent as planned.

To apply, visit the City of West Sacramento's website at www.westsacfun.org (then look for Community Mini-Grants under department highlights) or pick-up an application at the Parks & Recreation office located on the 1st floor in City Hall.

For more information or questions, please contact the Parks & Recreation office at (916) 617-4620.

can only put 'x' number of people in there. As a result, there are very few people convicted of misdemeanors who stay very long in that jail. Those are the first people to get released... The truth of it is, if you're in there for a minor misdemeanor and the judge gives you 10 days, you're likely to spend a couple of days in there and then go out into a work program or something."

County-wide growth will increase the demands on the jail, he said. Another source of pressure is changing policies at the state level, meant to save California money.

"They're changing the rules so that it's easier to have felons housed in county jails (instead of state prisons)," said McGowan. "That saves money, but the price of running the jail goes up."

And local jails are seeing the effect decreased state funding to mental health services, he said.

"As they reduce the funding to services for people with mental health issues, more of those people end up in jail. There's nowhere else for them to go, and once they get to jail, they demand the same treatment they otherwise would get at a mental health institution. That runs the cost up."

So does Yolo County have a "Plan B" to expand its jail?

"I'd have to say 'no'," answered McGowan. "We do not have a clear alternative. We've been preoccupied with budget issues. But we have to come up with a plan, and we will. It could lead to things like asking people to pay a crime tax."

Strange BUT TRUE

Q. I had read somewhere that Jennifer Love Hewitt was dating her "Ghost Whisperer" co-star Jamie Kennedy. I thought she was engaged to another actor who had appeared on her show. Which is correct? — Brittany H., via e-mail

A. Jennifer, 30, had been dating Scottish actor Ross McCall, whom she met when he guest-starred on "The Ghost Whisperer." However, after being together about two-and-a-half years, the couple called it quits. Jennifer — who also happens to have a history of dating musicians (Enrique Iglesias, John Meyer, Rich Cronin and Joey Lawrence) — is now with actor/comedian Jamie Kennedy, 39.

Q. What are the "Harry Potter" actors going to do once the movie series is over? — Faith G., Asbury Park, N.J.

A. Harry Potter himself, Daniel Radcliffe, wants to continue his acting career, and perhaps branch out into directing. He has already made a name for himself outside the "Harry Potter" realm by starring in the London (2007) and Broadway (2008) productions of the play "Equus," as well as the 2007 film "December Boys" — which were just about the only things he could squeeze in between "Harry Potter" movies.

Rupert Grint, who plays Ron Weasley, is eager to try his hand at comedy. He also has two movies coming out between "Half-Blood Prince" and "Deathly Hallows: Part 1"; one is called "Cherrybomb," the other is "Wild Target." Emma Watson, aka Hermoine Granger, has not ruled out a career in the film industry; however, she plans to attend Brown University in the fall to study literature.

Q. I've heard rumors that there is going to be a "Veronica Mars" movie. I hope it's true, because I really miss that show! — Greta J., via e-mail

A. While there are no known plans for a "Veronica Mars" movie, that doesn't mean that there isn't interest — especially from "Veronica" herself, actress Kristen Bell. Kristen — who co-stars with Jason Bateman, Jon Favreau, Vince Vaughn and Kristin Davis in this fall's feature film "Couples Retreat" — has expressed great interest in filming a movie based on the cult hit, along with series creator Rob Thomas. Kristen revealed on her personal blog that while she and Rob are interested in making the movie, bosses at Warner Brothers are skeptical that enough fans are interested. Kristen is urging all her fans to write in to the WB and let them know they want a "Veronica Mars" movie.

Jennifer Love Hewitt

WSFD helps with brush fire north of city limits

West Sacramento Firefighters assisted the Elkhorn Fire District to the north with a brush fire on the evening of July 27, the department reports.

The fire occurred on Old River Road just north of the weir bridge (just north of West Sacramento city limits). Brush and railroad ties were burning on the Sierra Northern Railroad easement, on about an acre. The heavy availability of fuel at the site required firefighters from both departments to spend two hours at the scene, in 95-degree heat, turning and soaking railroad ties and smothering coals.

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL

Best way to get that Trader Joe's

The News-Ledger last week mentioned that Caltrans is saving millions of dollars off of its original budget for the $16 million re-invention of West Sacramento's Harbor Boulevard freeway interchange. The state agency is leading the way to turn that congested interchange into an expanded "partial cloverleaf" interchange.

A Caltrans spokesman said that the taxpayers paying for the project will benefit by timing. Bids for the work went out during the current recession. Contractors are "hungry" due largely to a steep dive in the amount of construction going on, as compared to previous "boom" years. So the bids came in much lower than budgeted.

The same phenomenon may be at play for your own home repair or home improvement project – even if you have less than a $16 million budget. Small contractors, too, are hungry. If you have the means to undertake a home improvement project now, you'll likely save some money by doing so.

And your little project will be something of an economic stimulus. You'll be moving money around the local economy with your investment. The money will go where it's needed, when it's needed.

Speaking of which:

Mayor Cabaldon earlier this year spoke of the need to "buy local." A campaign to do just that has been organized by the Chamber of Commerce and businesspeople such as those who operate Grocery Outlet on Harbor Boulevard.

Buying local can help recirculate money around West Sacramento's economy. It can also help retain – and even attract – businesses.

Cabaldon offered a message specific to those West Sacramentans who are on a campaign to bring a Trader Joe's store to this city. He opined that the best thing that people can do to bring a favorite store or restaurant to West Sacramento is to support the stores and restaurants that are already here. When these existing establishments thrive and show good sales revenues, they will stay – and new stores and restaurants will be eager to come to West Sac and join them.

So it comes to this: one of the best ways to attract your favorite place (that isn't here) is to go out of your way to patronize your second- or third-favorite place (that is here).

Plus, you'll be helping prop up the local economy.

Too-tall sign: a property rights issue?

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's code enforcement officer thinks one local business may challenge the need to comply with the city's business sign ordinance.

U-Haul's truck rental location at 1750 West Capitol Avenue still sports a tall "pole sign" that's too high to be legal, according to local regulations. The new sign ordinance became effective in 2008 – over 10 years after they were adopted and publicized.

The ordinance was designed to reduce the clutter and "blighted" appearance of much of the city's aging business district.

Casualties of the sign ordinance include the famous "whirlybird" revolving sign at Safeway and, more recently, the US Bank sign on Jefferson Blvd. Both have been replaced. The Midas shop on Jefferson also will probably replace its sign soon, reports Larry Brooks, the code enforcement officer.

"That will probably make U-Haul the only major one left out of compliance."

Brooks said city officials have met with company representatives and tried to negotiate a solution.

"We went from everybody being cordial to things getting a little bit ugly," said Brooks. "The planning department has told us to move forward with an enforcement action."

In December, U-Haul's local manager referred the News-Ledger to the company's corporate office for comment.

Joanne Fried, director of marketing and public relations for the corporation, said then that "we are going to do what we need to do."

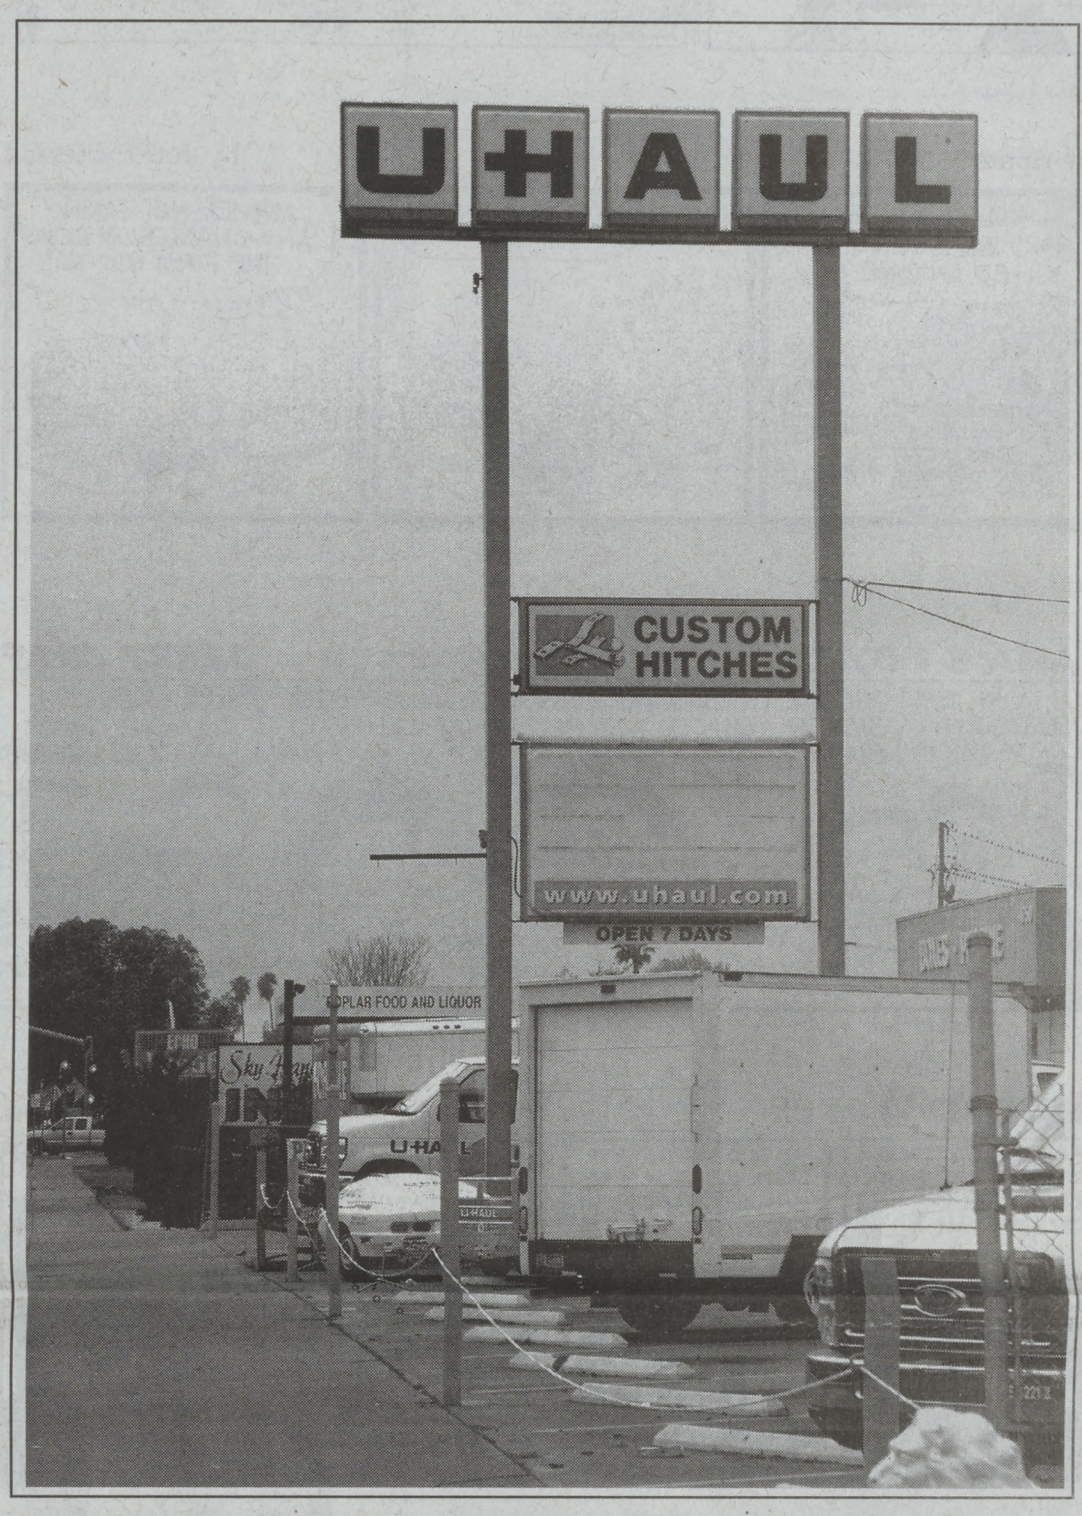
"We could submit an application for a variance," she added, "but I'm not sure that will be the proper direction to go."

Last month, Fried still sounded conciliatory.

"We've had amicable discussions with the city on what to do, and are deciding what to do," she said.

Brooks has told the News-Ledger that U-Haul has challenged local ordinances in other cities. He thinks the same may happen here.

"We will send them a notice to appear before a nuisance abatement officer," he said.



U-Haul has argued it needs a sign this tall so rental customers can find it

DOG OF THE WEEK

"17 Again" — Oh goodie, ANOTHER body-switching movie! Y'know, for my money, there just aren't enough of them. No sir. In this movie, Zac Efron plays a 1989 high-school basketball star who is on his way to winning the championship game and a college scholarship. But all that changes when he discovers his girlfriend is pregnant, so he gives up his dreams in order to Do The Right Thing.

Flash forward 20 years, and Zac Efron has grown up to be Matthew Perry — 'cuz that's how genetics works. It's true. When I was 17, I looked like Steve Urkel. At 37, I looked like Jason Statham. In another 20 years, I will be Wilford Brimley. After I die, I will look like Betty White. You know, as nature intended.

Anyhoo, after some weird hocusy-pocusy stuff involving a creepy high-school janitor, Matthew Perry is transformed back into Zac Efron, who takes his newfound youth and exuberance and heads back to school so he can micromanage his two kids' lives and deliver an abstinence lecture to his classmates — thus fulfilling every middle-aged man's "I Wish I Were 17 Again" fantasy.

Seriously, WHO was "17 Again" made for? For the teens, it's just another Moral Message movie shoved down their throats, and for adults, it's yet another flaccid tween comedy with the added value of a guilt trip about how men should pay more attention to their wives and children.

Thanks, Hollywood!

Zac Efron

Who?) who comes into his life and teaches him Important Lessons. "Gigantic" is one of those indie films that folks at Sundance just gobble up like Pez. It's Quirky! It's Whimsical! It's 16 tons of Quimsical crushing your will to live. And it'll do it ironically.

Singing Was the Easy Part
by Vic Damone, with David Chanoff
(St. Martin's Press, $25.95)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Vic Damone's introduction to show business was as an usher at New York City's legendary Paramount Theater.

Born Vito Rocco Farinola in Bensonhurst, N.Y., in 1928, he was forced to drop out of high school when his father suffered an on-the-job injury. He managed to find work at the Paramount, and while there, he took vocal lessons. Perry Como was so impressed by Farinola that he helped arrange an audition for him with a local orchestra, and Milton Berle was instrumental in landing him an important job at the La Martinique Club. Farinola was soon dropped in favor of Damone, his mother's maiden name.

Damone's crisp voice was a natural for the recording studio. In 1947, he cut his first record, "I Have But One Heart," at Mercury, and it soared to No. 7 on the Billboard chart. The following year, he was hired to host "Saturday Night Serenade," a weekly network radio show. When he traveled to the West Coast, he created a sensation at Hollywood's Mocambo Club, which led to a film contact.

His adventures and misadventures make this one of the more interesting show-business stories. For example, Damone relates how a mob boss once dangled him from an upper window of the Edison Hotel in New York after a broken engagement with the gangster's daughter. He married five incredibly beautiful and talented women, including Italian actress Pier Angeli, entertainer Becky Ann Jones and Broadway and recording star Diahann Carroll.

Damone writes candidly of his bankruptcy, failed marriages and how he managed to endure even during the roughest of times, but it's his vignettes that make this book so intriguing. Getting drunk with Ava Gardner, golfing with Jack Benny, spending quality time with Frank Sinatra, and taking a nude chorus girl into the steam room of the Sands Hotel where the Rat Pack was relaxing between shows are just a few of the great stories that make this book sizzle.

The Kitchen Diva

BY Angela Shelf Medearis

Super Chef Creates Sizzling Dishes

There's a new breed of superstar in the culinary world, and Manfred Lassahn, senior executive chef of the Hyatt Regency Century Plaza in Los Angeles, ranks as one of the brightest and the best. Chef Lassahn is responsible for servicing all of the food and beverage outlets for the renowned, 726-room urban resort hotel that boasts the largest ballroom in Los Angeles.

Chef Lassahn had an unusual entrée into the culinary field. He fell in love with baking while working after school at a pastry shop near his home in San Francisco. Pastry is still Chef Lassahn's first love. He finished high school and college at the same time, and upon graduation, he went to Europe to attend culinary school at the Gewerbliche Fachschule in Wuppertal, Germany. A child of German immigrants, Lassahn is fluent in the language and had no trouble adapting to the rigorous professional training. He apprenticed at the Hotel Haus Julina and graduated from culinary school in 1983. Lassahn returned to San Francisco and was immediately hired by the Hyatt Hotel chain.

Lassahn excels at opening new Hyatt hotels and creating exciting seasonal menus that complement the location and demographic of the community. His personal philosophy is rooted in the German work ethic that "prior planning prevents poor performance." Although he has a European background, he leans towards Pacific Rim ingredients and recipes from Chile to Australia.

Lassahn writes new menus for each season for Hyatt Century Plaza's signature fine-dining restaurant, Breeze, as well as for the X Bar, an urbane lounge with a soothing, hip vibe, and the recently revamped Lobby Court and Lounge. He creates each menu so that the venues have their own unique identities.

"People's eating habits have had a big impact on my culinary viewpoint," Lassahan says. "It's not about what I put on the table; it's about what you want to eat."

Chef Lassahn loves using cilantro and pepper in his delicious dishes. One of my favorite recipes that Chef Lassahn created for the X Bar is his Fiery Chicken Bites. The creamy Roquefort cheese dipping sauce coolly complements the spicy morsels of chicken. Chef Lassahn's Fiery Chicken Bites is the perfect recipe for a simple, relaxing gathering with friends, and strikes just the right balance between a light snack and a hearty appetizer.

Boat fire along Southport's banks

A West Sacramento fireboat (right) pours water onto the remains of a burned hull near Sherwood Harbor Marina

Three people jumped from a boat into the Sacramento River after a fire broke out on July 24, but a fourth suffered second-degree burns.

Firefighters responded at 7:16 p.m. to the boat fire on the bank of the river south of Sherwood Marina in Southport, treating injuries to the victim's legs and hand. They also used an absorbent "boom" to surround the boat and collect any leaking gas or oil.

Website connects you to health & social services

From First 5 Yolo

First 5 Yolo has launched a new Web site called "CompassHelps" that connects Yolo County residents with available healthcare and social service programs. "CompassHelps" is a quick and easy way for individuals and families to screen themselves for eligibility among multiple public assistance programs and services in the convenience and privacy of their homes.

It is located at www.compasshelps.org.

"Anyone using the Internet, either at home or at one of the many public locations in the county, can quickly look up available services and pre-screen themselves for eligibility" said First 5 Yolo Children's Health Program Coordinator Jackie Hausman in a press release. "In addition, the Web site is very easy to navigate and will soon save client information in a confidential record in the broader Compass system so people don't have to re-enter basic information every time they contact an agency for help."

CompassHelps currently includes information about California's Food Stamps program and a variety of free and low-cost health insurance programs for children and pregnant women. These insurance programs include Medi-Cal for Children and Pregnant Women (California's Medicaid program), Healthy Families (California's Children's Health Insurance Program), the Kaiser Child Health Plan (subsidized health insurance offered by Kaiser Permanente) and Healthy Kids (subsidized health insurance for children living in Yolo County).

For people seeking help filling out the applications or navigating the enrollment process, the Web site provides information about community organizations that offer assistance.

"For those who don't have computers at home, the local public libraries, the Department of Employment and Social Services in West Sacramento, and First 5 Yolo partner agencies such as RISE in Esparto, Yolo County Children's Alliance in Davis, and the Yolo Family Resource Centers in Woodland have computers available for people to use," noted First 5 Yolo Executive Director Julie Gallelo.

Yolo County residents also may connect to the CompassHelps Web site by going to the First 5 Yolo Web site at www.first5yolo.org.
